CHAPTER I. OF THE EARTH AND ITS MOTIONS.

The Earth is a sphere, and its diameter is about 7912 miles. It is divided into four quarters, called the North, South, East, and West Indies. The North and South Indies are separated by the Equator, which is a great circle of the Earth, equidistant from the North and South Poles. The East and West Indies are separated by the Prime Meridian, which is a great circle of the Earth, passing through the North and South Poles, and the Equator. The North Pole is the point where the Earth's axis of rotation meets the surface, and the South Pole is the point where it meets the surface on the opposite side. The Equator is the line of latitude that is equidistant from the North and South Poles. The Prime Meridian is the line of longitude that is equidistant from the East and West Poles. The Earth's axis of rotation is a line that passes through the North and South Poles, and is perpendicular to the plane of the Equator. The Earth's axis of rotation is inclined at an angle of about 23.5 degrees to the perpendicular of the plane of the Equator. This inclination is the cause of the seasons. The Earth's axis of rotation is also the cause of the day and night. The Earth's axis of rotation is inclined at an angle of about 23.5 degrees to the perpendicular of the plane of the Equator. This inclination is the cause of the seasons. The Earth's axis of rotation is also the cause of the day and night.

CHAPTER II. OF THE SUN AND ITS MOTIONS.

The Sun is a sphere, and its diameter is about 864,000 miles. It is the center of the solar system, and all the planets and comets revolve around it. The Sun's axis of rotation is a line that passes through the center of the Sun, and is perpendicular to the plane of the Equator. The Sun's axis of rotation is inclined at an angle of about 23.5 degrees to the perpendicular of the plane of the Equator. This inclination is the cause of the seasons. The Sun's axis of rotation is also the cause of the day and night. The Sun's axis of rotation is inclined at an angle of about 23.5 degrees to the perpendicular of the plane of the Equator. This inclination is the cause of the seasons. The Sun's axis of rotation is also the cause of the day and night.
